HECTIC HOLIDAY in Heartlake City!

IT SMELLS AMAZING IN HERE!

The girls get ready for a fabulous holiday feast with silly surprises along the way!

"It smells amazing in here!"

Stephanie, busy texting on her phone, followed Mia into the Cupcake Café.

"We have to pick up Olivia when we head to the holiday party, but her house is on the way," Stephanie informed Mia as they strolled inside.

The girls were there to pick up the catered food that Stephanie had ordered from the Heartlake City Supermarket and Cupcake Café.

"Okay!" Stephanie put her phone away and pulled out her trusty notebook. "Let's double check that everything is ready for us."

Sniffing a plate of food, Mia suddenly turned as red as her hair and sneezed into her arm.

"Ah-ahhh-choo!! Sniff ...
Stephanie, is there mint in that? I'm allergic to mint!"

"Oh no!" Stephanie quickly got a tissue box for her friend. "We'll have to remake some of the dishes ourselves ..."

"What?!" Mia blew her nose with a loud honk, "We don't have enough time!"

"Leave it to me!" Stephanie put her hair into a high pony tail, and grabbed a spoon. "They don't call me a kitchen wizard for nothing!"

Mia rolled her eyes and laughed. "Steph, no one calls you that."

"Well they should!"
Stephanie smiled.

While Stephanie and Mia cooked up a storm in Cupcake Café, across Heartlake City, Emma and Andrea were busy getting ready for the holiday party.

"What do you think, Andrea?"
Emma stood back and did jazz hands as she showed off the tiny, sparkly blue chair she had built for her poodle, Lady, to sit at the table.

"Awesome!" Andrea grinned and picked up the guitar she brought from home. "Live music, doggy dinner guests, plus Olivia told me she's bringing a surprise with her! It's gonna be a really fun party!"

At that moment, Olivia herself walked into the room, carrying a huge backpack on her shoulders. She was followed by Mia and Stephanie, carrying the food for the party.

"Sorry we're a little late ..." Stephanie began.

"—we had a little problem with the catering, but we—well really, Stephanie took care of it!" Mia grinned.

"And they picked me up on the way over." Olivia pulled a strange mechanical contraption out of her bag and put it on the table. "Andrea, drum roll please!"

"You got it!" Andrea rhythmically drummed her hands on the tabletop as Olivia showed off her invention.

"Introducing the Foodie Friend 2.0! This automated dining companion will pass the plates for us so we can focus on dinner conversation. Let's try it out!"

Everyone sat down at the table as Olivia grabbed her remote and, with an excited smile, turned on Foodie Friend 2.0.

That's when everything went wrong at the same time.

Foodie Friend 2.0 fired up and started passing plates, but one of the plates still had some mint on it. As the plate went past Mia, she smelled the mint and began sneezing violently.

"AHHH-CHOO!" Mia flew backward in her chair, and accidentally dragged part of the table cloth with her.

Olivia leapt out of her seat to get Mia a tissue, but Emma's puppy Lady, thinking Olivia wanted to play, jumped out of her chair and ran across the table.

"Lady, come back!" Emma climbed onto the table to chase after Lady. The Foodie Friend 2.0 spun out of control, flying right off the table and toward Andrea's instruments.

"Nooooo!" Andrea dashed to save her guitar, while Emma nearly fell off the table, only to be caught just in time by Stephanie.

Everyone began laughing as soon as they were sure they were all okay.

"This is definitely one of the most eventful events I've organized," Stephanie admitted.

Putting her guitar strap around her shoulders, Andrea smiled. "It's not a holiday without some hiccups! Let's just order a pizza and sing a few holiday songs!"

Emma passed out custom hats she knitted for everyone, as Mia ordered a pizza.

"It's not exactly the most normal holiday I've had," Olivia grinned, "but it's definitely one of the best!"

Stories from the Deep!

There's more hiding under the water's surface than you could ever imagine! Check out these fun facts about mythical sea creatures.

Sirens

Sea nymphs from Greek mythology that drew sailors to the rocks using their enchanted music, causing the sailors' ships to sink.

Kraken

A legendary sea monster often mentioned in pirate myths. Thought to be some sort of giant squid, it lived in the deep of the ocean, surfacing only to attack ships.

Naiads

Water nymphs that inhabited fountains, wells, springs, brooks, rivers, marshes, ponds and lagoons. They could be helpful and friendly, but they were also known for their jealous nature.

Kelpies

Shape-shifting creatures from Celtic lore that lived in brooks and rivers, and could take on the appearance of beautiful horses. Beware: whoever gets on this horse's back won't be able to get off!
